Insights

- Provincial capital of Jiangsu Province
- Second-largest commercial centre in the Yangtze River Delta (YRD)

Key Industries

- Automotive
- Education
- Petrochemicals
- ICT
- Iron & steel
- Power generation

Nanjing's industrial strengths are very focused on the six pillar industries highlighted above.

Fiat, Ford and Mazda have helped draw in a large number of component manufacturers and suppliers. MG Rover, which was the first overseas acquisition by any Chinese auto manufacturer, is now established in the market and is a flagship example of Sino-UK industrial co-operation.

Foreign Direct Investment

Foreign investors include:

- Fiat
- Ford
- Mazda
- Sharp
- Foxconn
- Alstom
- Honeywell
- Shell
- BP
- Standard Chartered Bank
- HSBC
- KPMG
- Deloitte
- Burberry
- Tesco

Opportunities

The following are projects which the city government is promoting in the next five years.

- Investment of RMB 40 billion in rail transport. Nanjing South Railway Station is one of four major projects planned to make Nanjing a hub with one-hour rail links to the major surrounding cities of Shanghai, Hangzhou and Hefei

- Investment of RMB 100 billion in urban rail transportation system, including an airport line. The length of this system to reach 250 km by 2015
- Development of track engineering systems, rail passenger coaches and other equipment and components
- Development of wind power and PV as a priority
- Development of aviation electromechanical systems and ground support equipment focused on automated air traffic control
- Second-stage expansion of Lūkou Airport
- Finish construction of Liuhe Maan Airport and relocation of Daxiao and Tushan Airports

Projections

Transport is key to Nanjing's continued success. As the YRD's metropolitan city clustering continues to expand further north and north west, Nanjing's provincial links and connections between Anhui Province and Shanghai will further enhance its status and bring other benefits to the existing financial and consumer service sector.
